Research Interests

I am broadly interested in cyber-security and distributed systems. My current research focuses on distributed systems security and efficiency, in emerging/evolving infrastructures and applications such as blockchains, web infrastructures, cloud computing, etc. My research tackles the fundamental design tradeoff between security and performance/cost. On the one hand, I analyze and measure large-scale deployed systems to identify, verify, and mitigate vulnerabilities. On the other hand, I optimize performance and build middlewares on security-centric systems.
